Not all Krav is the same, so which specific Krav are these "great, real-world training events"? There's the US National Krav Maga Association, the NKKMA (not to be confused with the NKMA), the UK Krav Maga Association, the IFKA and the IKFKA, The Israeli Krav Maga Association, and the Can Am Krav Maga Association, just to name a few... The bottom line is that Krav training can be an intense, even violent, experience, so I'd advise against trying to go and fight in the streets in the real world! There's a reason I like to train in more controlled environments, such as BJJ or MMA gyms, and there's a reason why all the instructors in the article are properly qualified! We've already got well-trained, experienced instructors training the world's elite level competition. As long as your teacher is qualified, I'm not sure how useful your "real-world training" is.
